A limited access to health protection and an insufficient accessibility of the social infrastructure are some of the problems occurring in the Polish-Belarusian-Ukrainian border area. The implementation of the SAFETY thematic objective within the Programme Poland-Belarus-Ukraine 2014-2020 serves, among others, to facilitate access to health protection, preventing the spread of diseases across borders, and promoting the development of social services.

Currently, due to the coronavirus pandemic, we are thinking more about health security than ever before. The Programme Poland-Belarus-Ukraine 2014-2020 has joined the fight against the pandemic - additional funds for the purchase of equipment, tests and personal protective supplies have been allocated to hospitals implementing projects co-financed by the Programme.

The combination of the subject of health and safety at the beginning of the 21st century has resulted in the emergence of a new concept - health security. In May 2001, it was described in a resolution of the World Health Assembly entitled Global health security: epidemic alert and response. It emphasizes that infectious diseases spread regardless of borders, which shows how important the joint actions of neighbouring countries are when developing procedures for counteracting emergency situations.

By organizing the International Conference „Health Security In The Cross-Border Cooperation Area Of The Poland-Belarus-Ukraine Programme”, we want to encourage scientists to analyse the issues of health security in the context of projects implemented within the Programme. During the conference, we will take up and discuss the following topics:

1. Increasing the effectiveness of preventing and combating infectious diseases.
2. Socio-economic effects of epidemiological situations.
3. Coordination of services and inspections in the event of an epidemiological threat.
4. Reliable reporting of epidemic threats by various information centres (including government institutions and the media).
5. A variety of positions and opinions of experts and scientists in counteracting pandemic threat situations.

ORGANIZATIONAL INFORMATION

In order to declare readiness to participate in the Conference, an electronic application form containing basic data, title and short abstract (up to 1000 characters) in the national language should be sent by 19th October 2020 (new deadline!).
